In the original article, in the fifth page, in the Strengths and Limitations section, it was incorrectly stated that:

However, our study sample of 132 transgender individuals is of relevance if we consider that two studies based on nationally representative samples have included 168²⁹ and 154² self-identified transgender individuals.

However, the number of self-identified transgender individuals has now been corrected to 168²⁹ and 154², respectively, where the superscripts refer to the References list.
